Claim 1, as originally filed in Serial No. 726,767, is considered to be generic to the embodiments disclosed in that application of having a single piece or a plurality of pieces of material forming the enclosure. Therefore, Applicants' argument that the reissue claims requiring a plurality of pieces are narrower than the original broad claim is well taken.

The reissue declaration filed with this application is defective because it states that the discovery of the error was caused by the development of a new embodiment after the patent had issued. Inasmuch as the purpose of a Reissue Application is to correct errors that occur during prosecution, the question is raised as to how development after a patent issues of a new embodiment requiring a new material can point to an error in the prosecution of the patent.

Claims 1-3 are rejected as being based upon a defective reissue declaration under 37 CFR 1.175.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103 which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Subject matter developed by another person, which qualifies as prior art only under subsection (f) and (g) of section 102 of this title, shall not preclude patentability under this section where the subject matter and the claimed invention were, at the time the invention was made, owned by the same person or subject to an obligation of assignment to the same person.

Claims 12-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103 as being unpatentable over Paschal in view of Beck.

Paschal discloses everything claimed with the possible exception of the properties of the elastic material. Paschal does state that his enclosure can be made from "flexible plastic material or any other suitable flexible material which is impervious to liquid". Beck discloses the use of rubber as the elastic material for a lubricant filled massaging device similar to the type disclosed by Paschal. In view of the teachings of Paschal and Beck, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to use rubber for the elastic material of Paschal because of its known suitability for such a use, rubber being disclosed by Applicants as meeting the claim limitations of the properties of the material.

It is noted that in the amendment filed on August 29, 1986 to add the recitation that the enclosure is made of a single piece of material, it was argued by Applicants on pages 5-6 that the added recitation is what differentiates the claimed invention from the Paschal device because Paschal uses two pieces of material, not meeting the limitation of a single piece. Removing this limitation, as is done by the reissue
